Maze Runner: The Death Cure

IN THEATERS JAN. 26

In this trilogy finale, the world remains plagued by an incurable disease and ruled by cold-blooded scientists, who are rounding up immune humans, desperately seeking a cure. And immune rebel leader Thomas (Dylan O'Brien) is coming for them. With an action-packed, on-the-run pace, this last chapter is pretty spectacular.

Please Stand By

IN THEATERS AND ON DEMAND JAN. 26

Dakota Fanning stars as an autistic woman who uses her Star Trek obsession as the impetus to enter a script-writing contest. When she escapes from her caregiver (Toni Collette), the ensuing road trip allows her the independence to not just survive, but to thrive. The heartwarming story drags in places, but Fanning's portrayal makes it worth seeing.

Mom and Dad

IN THEATERS AND ON DEMAND NOW

Parents have a strong protective instinct — but in this deranged horror comedy, something throws it into reverse, causing moms and dads everywhere to start slaughtering their kids. Nicolas Cage and Selma Blair (both terrific) star as a couple with problems, who are brought closer...by their sudden mutual desire to off their offspring. Despite a disappointing ending, this is entertaining fun — but leave the kids at home.

STAR REVIEW

The show I can't miss:

"I'm obsessed with The Handmaid's Tale. The season finale [gave me] chills! That's my hot show right now. Can't get enough."

The last movie I loved:

"The Big Sick. It's hysterical! I laughed start to finish. It's really about how we relate to one another. That's what makes it so funny."

The last book I read:

"The Woman in Cabin 10 [by Ruth Ware]. It's exciting! I love a thriller."
